NEWS FROM UNITED STATES CITIES AND TOWNS.

Crooked Dealings of Railway Companies—Gould on Railway Matters—Big Trees to be Sent to the World's Fair—Run on Banks.

MIDDLEBORO, Ky., Nov. 21.—The Duke of Marlborough who with the duchess and a few friends has been spending a couple of days in this city, to-day made a heavy purchase of Middleborough Town and American Association stock, being guided to this purchase by his investigation of the properties.

The recent visit of the British iron and steel masters to this country is already bearing fruit.

A. A. Arthur is on his way to England to close contracts for the transfer of two iron working plants from England to Middleborough.

The Duke of Northumberland and the Duke of Devonshire through their agents who were in this city, are arranging to open up large coal mines.

Gould Says He Must.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—The Herald says: Chas. Francis Adams it is understood will retire from the U. P. Railway sooner than expected. Both he and Frederick L. Ames have been in New York for two days canvassing the situation. The latter after a consultation with the "little wizard" went back to Boston yesterday. Adams is not on good terms with the "little wizard" but Ames met him at the Union League club on various occasions and told him that Gould said he should retire from the Union Pacific. Some years ago in a literary review he called attention to some of Gould's misdeeds and the latter has ever since denounced him as too much of a theorist to run a railroad. Horney handed sons of toil like Russell Sage made the complaint that Adams has some ideas that are too refined for him. The unconditional resignation of Adams was demanded by the Ames-Gould conference and it is understood that he will resign. He declined to discuss the matter with a newspaper man.

Valuable Animals.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 19.—The whaling steamer Jessie H. Freeman arrived yesterday, sixteen days from Fox island. She reported having caught four whales, yielding 330 barrels of oil and 7000 pounds of bone. The Freeman reports having spoken the whaling steamer Belvedere, which had nine whales, the value of which will not fall short of $80,000.

Crooked Dealings.

CHICAGO, Nov. 20.—The United States grand jury is in possession of figures showing the daily handlings of grain rates extending over a period of six months. These figures were originally compiled by H. F. Densman of the Chicago board of trade and they prove from buying and selling prices of daily shipments of grain in that period that tariff rates could not have been paid. This grain came on every one of the Chicago lines with possibly one exception. Yesterday and to-day the grand jury was inquiring into this manipulation. The list of witnesses as subpœned is the freight and traffic officials of westbound Chicago roads. Railroad men are convinced that the number of indictments will be found at the end of the investigation. All evidence is in regard to the Panhandle and Illinois Central company manipulations. Opinions are divided as to whether an indictment will hold against the Central Company in view of the fact that it sent a cheque for $17,000, the full amount of the manipulation to the Panhandle after the deal was exposed by Secretary Romier of general traffic inspections.

Lowered His Own Record.

STOCKTON, Cal., Nov. 20.—Stamboul trotted here to-day in 2:11¼. The track was in magnificent condition, but Stamboul was not, being considered over fat. Few expected that he would lower his record; but he did lower it one-quarter of a second, his previous time being 2:11½.

Rev. Monroe Resigns.

STOCKTON, Nov. 17.—Rev. Mr. Monroe, who created such a stir in this city by preaching a sensational sermon on Sunday morning, making a confession of his evil thoughts toward female members of his congregation, has sent in his resignation to the Presbyterian trustees. He has recovered from his religious excitement and regrets what he did. The presbytery will be convened to take action.

TREES 400 FEET HIGH.

Their Tops Are in the Clouds—Trees One-Eighth of a Mile High—Still Growing.

WASHINGTON CITY, Nov. 19.—Through a newspaper clipping which fell into the hands of the commissioner of the general land office recently a hint was given of the discovery of an immense growth of mammoth trees in Pierce county, Wash. It was stated that the trees were 650 feet high. The commissioner detailed special agent Cyrus Mosier to investigate the story, and he went to Pierce county and found the man who had originated it. He said that the trees were not 650 feet high, but were at least 400 feet in height and many of them thirteen feet in diameter. They were located in a remote canyon in the southeastern corner of Pierce county. Owing to the snow special agent Mosier was unable to penetrate into the canyon, which is said to be almost entirely unexplored by man.

There is no official information on the subject, but citizens of the country are anxious that samples of the gigantic trees be sent to the World's fair at Chicago, such a tree would be too large to send by rail, owing to curves, and it is proposed to take it by way of the ocean around Cape Horn to the Gulf of St. Lawrence, up the St. Lawrence river and by way of the lakes to Chicago, the tree being transported by land only for a short distance in order to avoid the Niagara falls.

It is the intention of the commissioner of the general land office, as soon as the new season opens, to fully investigate the matter of the alleged discovery in Pierce county.

RUN ON TWO BANKS.

Almost a Riot on the Bowery—Newark Institution Besieged.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—In some unaccountable way to-day rumors were started that the Citizen's Savings Bank, 58 Bowery, was in trouble. The depositors were largely of the lower class of Hebrews, Poles and Germans from the east side of the city, and soon the doors of the institution were besieged by crowds of excited people who became so riotous that the police had to be called. President Quintard this evening said that about $100,000 had been paid out and that the bank was all right. He showed by the books that the bank had a surplus of $1,400,000.

NEWARK, N.J., Nov. 19.—There was a run on the Howard Savings institution to-day. Money was paid out as fast as the clerks could count it. President Frelinghuysen says the bank can pay every depositor in full and have $1,000,000 left.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—Joseph Freicker, dealer in teas and coffees, has failed. The assignee of Gallaudet & Co. said to-day that the approximate statement showed the firm's assets to be over $170,000 and the liabilities about $700,000.

PATHETIC DEATH.

An Aged Husband Sits Two Days by his Wife's Corpse.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—Lydia T. Avery, the aged wife of B. S. Avery, died two days ago at her home on Capitol street, and her death was not discovered till to-day although her husband was in the house with her continually. Mrs. Avery has been sick for some months and her husband, a feeble man more than 80 years old, has been nursing her. Yesterday Mr. Avery called in a neighbor who told him that he believed that Mrs. Avery was dead. Mr. Avery would not believe it, and for another day he sat by her bedside offering food to her and waiting for her to speak to him. This morning, he summoned one of the neighbors and a doctor was called in who said Mrs. Avery was dead more than 48 hours. The remains were taken to Norwich, Conn., which was Mr. and Mrs. Avery's home before they came to Washington, 37 years ago. Mr. Avery held a position in the coast survey bureau for 32 years. He is well to do.

A BIG FAILURE.

A Company That Had Too Many Irons in the Fire.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Nov. 21.—Barker Bros. have been carrying the Charleston, Cincinnati & Chicago Railroad line projected from Charleston, S.C., to Irontown, Ohio, on the Ohio river. Only parts of the road have been finished, but the company have negotiated with a firm for the issue of $6,000,000 bonds, most of which are said to have been placed in the hands of the public. Wharton Barker visited England some months ago to interest British capitalists in the scheme, and it is said that financial aid was withheld when it was discovered that bonds were to be sold at the rate of $25,000 per mile and had been re-issued. One of the most important links to be built was through the mountainous region of North Carolina and the cost of the road here was certain to reach high figures. Those far beyond the rate under which the bulk of the bond issue was made caused the failure to enlist English capital. When these facts were brought out it left Barker Bros. the burden of carrying the bonds. The failed firm also underwrote the issues of the Oregon Pacific railroad which is projected from Yaquina bay to the eastern boundary of Oregon. The company has completed only 166 miles out of the contemplated mileage of about 600 and only 13 miles are actually in operation. The company was placed in the hands of a receiver a few days ago.

The San Antone & Aransas Pass railroad which lately defaulted on its interest was another enterprise in which the house was interested. It also negotiated the equipment trust of five per cent. bonds of the Baltimore & Ohio.

The steamer Delaware still lies at the Mission and is supported by means of ropes fastened to the shore to prevent any mishap. It is quite probable that a diver will be sent up to repair the damage under water.

Large shipments of hay, and grain are arriving daily by the C. P. N. Co's boats. The wharves present a very busy appearance at present owing to the handling of the large amount of local freight that keeps coming in as well as the cargoes of the Brodick Bay and Mennock.

CABLEGRAMS FROM THE OLD WORLD CENTRES.

Koch's Consumption Cure Indorsed by Physicians—A Peculiar Temperance Speech—Parnell's Position in Politics—Financial Affairs.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—Frank P. Slavin announces that W. A. Brady of New York has offered $500 per week to act in "After Dark" at the American Theatre, opening in New York at the 14th street theatre. Brady also offers to get Slavin backing from one to twenty-five thousand dollars to fight Sullivan. Slavin wishes to say in reply that he will not accept the terms offered. He would require a thousand dollars per week, with substantial guarantee. So far as Sullivan is concerned, Slavin says he can get the figures named in London, either in dollars or in pounds, whenever Sullivan wants to fight.

Great Doctors Indorse Koch's Remedy.

BERLIN, Nov. 19. — To-morrow's number of the German Medical Weekly will contain articles signed by Drs. Bergmann, Fraentzel and William Levy, and Staff-Surgeon Kaehl, in which they declare that after experiments in many different cases they are prepared to fully endorse Professor Koch's statements regarding his remedy.

Herbert Ward Attacks Stanley.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—Herbert Ward writes to the Times a letter, stating that Stanley's column was not above reproach, and that he himself had buried dead men that Stanley had left in the road. He asks why Stanley left inexperienced officers in charge of the rear guard, and with such orders. Ward declares that with all his acknowledged faults, Major Barttelot, with splendid loyalty to the best traditions of his service, held sacred every instruction of Stanley to the last. In the face of starvation he refused to open the stores that Stanley had warned him were essential to the success of the expedition, and yet Stanley accuses him of disloyalty.

Queen Victoria Endorses Salvation Army.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—Solicitor General Sir Edward Clark has contributed £50 toward General Booth's regeneration scheme. General Ponsoby, secretary to the Queen, has written to General Bobth, thanking him for his book, and adding: "The Queen cannot express any opinion on the details of your scheme, but understanding that its object is to alleviate misery and suffering, her majesty cordially wishes you success.

English Politics.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—Gladstone remains at Hawaden, resting after his labors in Scotland and gathering strength for the opening of parliament. He is said to be in good health, though showing slight signs of exhaustion.

The Liberal campaign in the Sheffield district opened to-night with 20 meetings, held at as many places. The utmost efforts will be put forth to win a signal victory.

Peculiar Temperance Speech.

KINGSTON, Nov. 19.—Major Edwards, of the Royal Military College, surprised a temperance gathering on Tuesday night by his views. He thought abstinence a good thing for drunkards. His ideal of true temperance was when a barrel of mild beer would be on tap in every house up and down the land; when every man and woman should have half a pint three times a day. Such an ideal, he hoped, would some day be reached. Liquor, as a medicine, was a nice thing to take every day; without it men of a certain constitution would be sleepy and indolent. He held, of course, that the moderate use of wine was scriptural. At the close Mr. R. M. Horsey asked the Major if he had said that abstinence was a good thing for drunkards. He said "Yes." Mr. Horsey then said, "And I believe it is a good thing for the rising generation to prevent them from becoming drunkards." The Rev. Mr. McMorine, in whose church the gathering was held, added, "Yes; prevention is better than cure."

The Financial Situation.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—This has been a day of great excitement in financial circles, the wildest rumors being afloat in regard to the stability of a number of important houses. The feeling of confidence which was caused during the latter part of last week by the fact that the Bank of England had undertaken to practically "see everybody through," has been somewhat reacted from too, as the magnitude of the obligation becomes more fully realised. There was a slight improvement in prices toward the close of the day. It is the general impression now that it will be a long time before the market recovers. It is officially announced that the Bank of England will not from this time place any restriction on loans by reputable houses but will exert all its influence to relieve any stringency in the market.

Parnell's Present Position.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—The Labor World asks "Will the people's support of the Home Rule movement be imperiled by the refusal of Parnell to separate himself from the interests of Home Rule." The Parnell "article" continues. "He cannot plead ignorance of the feeling of the Liberal party regarding his new position." The Labor World maintains that those who argue that the control of the Irish party is the sole affair of the Irish, and that nothing will be involved or jeopardized if they do not repudiate Parnell's leadership, are unconsciously playing into the hands of their enemies. If the Home Rule and other papers continue with surpassing extraordinary ignorance of the necessities of the present political crisis, to act as that Parnell, as a Protestant, is not morally responsible to the Catholics, the who advance the latter theory are shaking the very foundations on which Home Rule stands in England. Mr. Parnell is asked to make a small sacrifice in return for the sacrifices a confiding and generous people have made for him. He must not consider his own political future in this crisis, but what is the best course to adopt in the interest of Home Rule in England. He must remember that he defied the Irish people when he rode roughshod over the feelings and opinions of his own party when, in 1886, in the presence of another serious crisis, he thrust O'Shea on the electors of Galway. The wounds thereby inflicted upon the minds of his ablest followers are not yet healed. Loyalty to union and fidelity to the cause compelled his colleagues to gulp down their indignation. Will Parnell now ask a similar sacrifice from his home rule friends in England?

Loyal to Parnell.

DUBLIN, Nov. 19. — United Ireland says: "We do not desire to condone Parnell's grievance, but from Ireland which he has served so long and faithfully, with such dear devotion and magnificent success, he may at least look for generous forbearance in the hour of his trial. He yielded to a temptation to which many great and wise men have succumbed since and before the days of King David. He has atoned by what to a man of his proud spirit must have been indeed bitter and humiliating, but to the coercionist's cry for his dismissal from the Irish leadership, Ireland's answer is sharp and decisive. No Irishman should judge his private life. Leave that to his conscience and his God, who weighs the temptation with the offense."

The Limerick and Ennis boards of guardians have adopted a vote of confidence in Parnell.

At a private meeting of the Irish members of parliament to-day it was resolved to remain loyal to Parnell.

Big Guns for Halifax.

HALIFAX, N. S., Nov. 19.—Military authorities here have been advised that a powerful 10-inch gun weighing 33 tons has been shipped on board the steamer Gothenberg City, now expected at this port from London, and preparations are being made for its reception. In addition to the one on the Gothenberg City, three other guns are to follow soon. At a range of 2000 yards a shot fired will penetrate wrought iron 19 inches thick. Two guns of this size and two 10-ton guns will be placed in the new fort on McNabb's island.

PRINCESS VICTORIA MARRIED.

All the Royal House of Germany Attend—A Magnificent Ceremony.

BERLIN, Nov. 19.—Princess Victoria of Prussia, sister of the Emperor, was married to day to Prince Adolph, of Schaumberg-Lippe. The ceremony took place in the chapel of Alteschloss. The chapel was filled with members of the Imperial family and the royal and princely house of Germany, in state robes, making a magnificent picture.

A BEARISH DISPATCH.

Reported Decline in Canadian Pacific—Sensational Disclosures Expected.

MONTREAL, Nov. 19.—The stock market this morning was panicky. Canadian Pacific fell from 73¼, last night's closing, to 66½, at which rate 2,700 shares were sold. This is a drop of 19½ per cent. since September. The banks have refused to issue call loans and brokers are shipping stock to New York and drawing on it to get money. Duncan McIntire, a director of the Canadian Pacific, is in financial straits. His losses are over $1,000,000 on Canadians in the last two months. Other Canadian magnates have gone to his assistance, holding the stock in anticipation of a rise on increased earnings. It is rumored that some Canadian Pacific people have been quietly unloading the past two months in anticipation of the sensational disclosures soon to come about the road's financial position.

THE FINANCIAL CRISIS.

Bank of England Refuses to Discount Baring Paper Before Maturity.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—Stocks opened very flat, but the prices of all securities afterward improved. At 1 p.m. American securities were 1 per cent. higher than at 12:30, when they were 1 to 3 lower than at last evening's close. The payment of coupons on Uruguay bonds has been provided for. After verging upon a panic, the market closed with a better tendency all around. The chief cause of the depression of the stock market was the refusal of the Bank of England to discount the bills of Baring Bros. & Co. before maturity.

The Times says: No bills drawn on Baring Bros. after last Saturday by correspondents will be accepted, all drawn previously will be recognized.

The Bank of England is practically in charge of the Barings' affairs, and it is probable that the firm will be resuscitated with fresh capital. The bank is charging a high rate of discount to prevent an in-rush of bills. It desires holders to exercise forbearance and not throw unnecessary work on the bank. All acceptances have already been provided for, and will be met at maturity.

The amount of bullion that has gone into the Bank of England on balance to-day is £110,000.

A loose statement regarding the position of the Barings again alarmed the guarantees to-day. Once more the Bank of England and the Rothschilds stepped in and there is every reason to expect that lenders will to-morrow announce accommodations liberally. One of the best authorities in financial circles now emphatically expresses the opinion that the worst of the depression has passed.

The British government was represented at the meeting of the Argentine committee to-day. The meeting soon adjourned till Monday.

CHAPTER XIX.

HUSBAND AND WIFE.

It must not be supposed that the sudden and remarkable change which had taken place in Mrs. Cameron's physical appearance had passed unnoticed or uncommented upon by society. It was too widely discussed, and awakened an equal number of surmises and questionable remarks.

"They say that Marie Antoinette's hair blanged in a night," it was not uncommon to hear. "But then there was a reason for that!" was almost invariably added. And the curiosity and interest which was thus aroused in both the male and female bosom, surrounded the youthful bride with a halo of romance. But there were some (there always are some) who could not see the rose for the thorns, or the star for the mist of their own breath blowing across it. From these, one could hear now and then sharp comments upon the pride which made Mrs. Cameron forget the courtesy due to her old friends. But such derogatory remarks were uttered mainly in asides and only now and then did they come to the ears of her they most concerned. But they did come sometimes. Were they to blame also for the decreasing pallor of her cheek, and the general decadence of her health which Dr. Cameron could not but notice? He began to watch her more closely, fearing to detect under her languor and growing melancholy the traces of disease yet more serious than the rheumatism of which she now and then complained.

She shrank when she found his eye upon her, and often at some petty shock, like the ringing of the door-bell or the sound of an unexpected voice over her shoulder, she gave such nervous starts that he became seriously alarmed and commenced to doctor her in good earnest.

It was evening. They had just returned from dining with Mr. and Mrs. Gretorex. There was a chilliness in the atmosphere of the Gretorex mansion which he felt himself, and while he was conscious of being an agreeable son-in-law to the proud railway king, he was also conscious of possessing no hold either upon his heart or that of his aristocratic wife. But as they never showed affection even to each other, he accepted their formal regard and was satisfied.

They were sitting in the parlor, and Dr. Cameron, anxious to behold her smile again, was talking gaily. Suddenly he paused and asked her a question about some one they had seen. She answered but vaguely; her thoughts were elsewhere. Judging from the direction of her gaze, they were on herself, she sat where she could see her own image mirrored in the glass before her, and it was upon this elegant figure, clad in grey velvet and pearls, that her eyes were fixed.

Her husband's eyes followed hers and listened merrily.

"An imposing figure," he smiled. "Did you think you would ever be a famous beauty, Genevieve?"

She knelt down at his feet.

"Am I pretty?" she asked—"to you?"

"No," he returned, "you are not pretty, you are beautiful, and just a little awe-inspiring. I love you, and I wonder at you; you are so different—"

She did not wait for him to finish.

"You love me," she murmured. "How much do you love me, Walter? Enough to care more for me than for my beauty? Could your heart still glow and your arms still embrace me, if instead of pleasing your eye I only appealed to your sympathies and affections? Do not say yes, carelessly, Walter, for I am in earnest. Speak! I am strong enough to hear."

He drew her to his side and answered gravely:

"You are my wife; you are the woman I have chosen for my own. I love your beauty—How can I help it?—and I love what gives that beauty life. Had I to choose, were it given me to have this lovely form, these brilliant eyes, this whole harmonious and speaking figure, with a cold and treacherous soul within it; or to have your heart, your intellect, your nature in a maded or marred body, I should take——"

"Which?"

Her eyes were burning, her lips were parted, she was breathless.

"Your heart and nature; I know I should, and I rejoice in it. You have charmed me, Genevieve; I cannot resist your spell which holds me and interests me more than any amount of grace or beauty could do."

"Then I am an enigma, only an enigma to you. When I am solved—"

"Will you ever be solved, Genevieve?"

She did not look as if she would. The depth of her regard, which was always remarkable, never struck him more forcibly than at this moment.

"I think the day will come," she remarked, "when you will no longer wonder at me. Will it be also true that you will no longer love me?"

She did not seem to expect a reply, and he did not give any. He encouraged her with a kiss on the hand that lay in his.

"I am; you want to know what I am going to ask next," she pursued. "Would you love me—" she dropped her eyes from his face—"if you found that I had kept something back from you which I ought to have told; that—that I had ever been in love before—that I had a secret in my life, as many women have, which, while it argues nothing wrong in my heart, still sends to my hours many regrets, and to my thoughts a shadow which all present brightness cannot quite charm away?"

"Genevieve!" His face had changed; his lips took a hard line. "Have you any such secret in your life? Did you ever love another man?"

She looked up, met his eye and quaked.

"Do you demand to know?" she asked.

His brows contracted; he thought of the promise she had given him to always tell him the truth, and hesitated. They were married; she loved him now, and any such raking up of old by-gones was certainly unwise as it was unpleasant. He would not press his question; he found he loved her too well.

"I demand nothing," was his reply. "The past is past; and we no longer have anything to do with it. As long as your heart is all mine now—and I am sure it is—what is it to me that you once smiled for a week or a month upon some one else. I could dare wager that no one but myself ever touched these lips."

Her smile flashed out bright and dazzling. "No one ever did," she said, and at that word and at that smile, his brow cleared and he almost laughed. "Most every life has had some harmless flirtations in it," he remarked. "I adored a girl myself once—for a fortnight. The value of true gold is more apparent after some slight handling of base."

She did not seem to hear what he said.

"I wish I could see you really cheerful again," he ventured. "You are not ill though to look so sad."

"I have read," she began, slowly, and as if pursuing her own train of thought, "that love is all powerful with some men. Is there truth in such tales? Is there a man among your acquaintance, for instance, who will be willing to sacrifice any really good thing he possessed for the sake of an unfortunate woman who was dependent upon him for happiness?"

"I hope—" he commenced.

But she stopped him with an imperious gesture.

"Do you know of one man," she asked, "who would share disgrace with a woman cheerfully?"

"Disgrace is a hard word," he asserted, "and cheerfully does not readily go with it."

"Yet women know how to join the two," said she, "when it comes to forsaking all for the man they love."

"I know; but women who love are angels, while men are never more than human under any circumstances."

She was pale, and looked as if an icy breath had passed over her.

"Is reputation so dear to you men?" she demanded. "Are your souls bound up in appearing well before the world?"

"Genevieve," said he, "these are curious questions; I do not understand why you put them, nor will I ask. But since you are in this humor I will acknowledge that the keenest agony that can be inflicted on a proud man is to rob him of his honorable position amongst men. He may suffer acutely from other losses. But take away from him the respect of men and he has no career, no life. He is but the shadow of a man, a hapless, blighted wretch whose true place is underground, and not amongst the men and women whom he cannot look honestly in the face."

"But——"

"I am thinking of an extreme case. Such does not come often to a man from a woman; it is more apt to come to a woman from a man."

"Yet there have been instances," she ventured.

"Yes," he concurred, "there have been instances."

A short silence followed these words.

"I do not know which to pity the most," she murmured at last; "the man who has lost so much by a woman or the woman who has caused the man she loves to lose so much. I think her pain must be the keener."

He shook his head.

"A woman who could commit a disgraceful act would not be apt to be hyper-sensitive about its effect upon her husband."

"I do not know. There are acts which do not seem to be disgraceful at the time, yet which may lead to shame. Were a woman to commit such, and were it that woman's fortune to be married—"

"One must pity her husband," he interposed.

She looked up, met his gaze and drew herself back into her old place at his side.

"You spoke of an extreme case just now," she softly whispered.

"Let us put it at its extremest. Say that I had done an act that if known would brand me for infamy; would your love be so slight that it would give way under the revelation, or would it hold firm, and though changed, remain to solace and encourage one who—who—never realized—"

Her voice sank to an unintelligible murmur.

"Genevieve," he cried, "these are not the questions of an excited fancy. There is meaning back of all this. What meaning? Is there disgrace lurking in the air for us? Have you done anything—"

But here her laugh broke out merrily and shrill. He stopped in his turn and looked at her in a sort of cloudy amazement. She rose and made him a mocking little courtesy; then she suddenly grew grave.

"Forgive me," she entreated. "I had a notion to test the extent of your love. I—I think there is yet opportunity for it to deepen and broaden. I did not know my happiness would hang upon your regard. Your regard," she repeated, "not the world's, Walter."

Fondly he surveyed her. He could have kissed the hem of her robe as she sat here, but he contented himself with a look.

"I am afraid," she softly resumed, "that I have many false notions. Kept to a petty round of thoughts and feelings, I have seen too little of real human life to realize all that there is in it. I was a child, or worse, I was a soul asleep, and only now am I really awake, and realize what is required of a woman when she loves and is loved. But I know now and am at once happy and miserable, triumphant and overwhelmed. Am I raving, Walter? I have kept so much pent up in my heart that I may go too far in my relief at speaking. Do you mind my talking so freely? Shall I stop and be proper again—and melancholy?"

"Do not be melancholy," he began—

But there seemed little danger of this. She was all smiles. "Kiss me!" she suddenly cried, lifting up a face bewitching in its mixture of appeal and audacity.

"That antidote I am willing to administer ad infinitum," he smiled "only you must promise me—"

"Not to ask any more questions?" she finished. "I will, and if trouble comes—"

She stopped with a start. The door-bell had rung.

The doctor woke as from a dream.

"Visitors or patients?" he quried.

It was evidently the latter; for just then the front door was opened, and a gentleman came in, followed by a decently dressed woman, who no sooner found herself in the luxurious hall than she seemed to shrink together and almost cower past the doors she had to pass on her way to the office. The doctor wondering at this, moved to follow. But before doing so, he gave his wife one other look and found her so smiling and so radiant, that he did not speak but passed on with lifted brow and a totally satisfied air. As for her she preserved her smile without seeming effort till the curtain had fallen across the door-way leading into the office. But once left entirely alone, she sank back in the seat she had occupied and for one wild moment seemed to give way to a despair that was none the less deep that it was silent. But she speedily controlled even this tone of weakness, and rising, looked again at herself in the glass, and adjuring the enchanting figure that confronted her, said:

"If you are beautiful, use that beauty to preserve your happiness. It can be done, and the incentive given you is great enough for anything. Hispeace of mind rests upon your success. Be successful then, at all hazards save that of untruth."

She was still glowing with the excitement of the moment, when the doctor's returning step was heard falling heavily on the carpet. Turning, her ardent color faded rapidly away. The gentleman who accompanied Dr. Cameron was Mr. Gryce.

UNINVITED VISITORS.

It Is to Be Hoped That All of Them Will Read This Article.

It seems as if measures ought to be taken to put an end to promiscuous visiting; in regard to which there is evidently no difference of opinion, writes a correspondent of the Country Gentleman. In these days of incompetent servants and anxious housekeepers, even the dearest friends can not feel quite sure of a cordial welcome. But when a horde of uninvited guests precipitate themselves with colossal effrontery upon a quiet, and perhaps frugal family, it becomes a most exasperating and intolerable nuisance. It is worse, if possible, than taking boarders, because visitors expect to be entertained—and liberally entertained—in many cases.

One of the most hospitable of hospitable Westerners said that he gave up his home and endured a boarding-house, because he was "tired of keeping a hotel." Another gentleman declared that he would put a small-pox notice on his house if it would keep away undesired visitors. And one lady wrote to some friends urging them pathetically to visit her, because now she would like to have some one in her house "whose society she could enjoy." A Westeru man, traveling with his wife and niece, thought it would be very fine to visit the Governor of a certain Eastern State. He never had seen any member of the family, but a niece of his had married one of his sons. He drove up to the house, and had his trunks deposited before the door. The Governor's wife, however, was a woman of dignity and determination, and the Western travelers did not see the inside of that stately mansion. They departed with trunks unpacked, and also with a good deal of wondering astonishment.

Of course, this cruelly destroys the beautiful halo surrounding the hospitable home with open doors ever ready for the entrance of "angels unawares." But when good Robert Collyer naively declares that he does not wish to "monopolize those angels," sinners surely may be pardoned if they, too, rebel.

Supposing each person should put this notice on his house—"No uninvited visitors received"—would even that be effectual?

THE TWO YOUNGSTERS.

A Tale Illustrating the Value of Truthfulness in the Long Run.

James and John were playmates and each twelve years old, says the Detroit Free Press. Their parents dwelt side by side, and so the two boys were much together. They "played horse" with the same hoe-handle, liked the same brand of pumpkin pie, and were pretty nearly one in all things. The one great exception was the fact that James would lie like a candidate for alderman, while John would tell the truth if it barked his shins. James often guyed him for this foolishness, but to no effect. He kept right on telling the truth and getting three lickings to any other boy's one.

One day when these two boys were going over to Mrs. Scott's to borrow her quilting frames and a drawing of tea they met a stranger, who looked at them intently, and finally asked:

"Boys, did you find a purse of gold on the road?"

"No, thir," promptly replied James the liar.

"Yith, thir," as promptly replied John the truthful, at the same time handing it out.

They had found such a purse, but, being a little absent-minded, I had forgotten to mention the fact.

"Ah, ha!" cried the stranger, "but I dropped it to test you! The proof is clear! Presto!—fizzledum!—change!"

And a great black cat leaped out of a thicket and bore the liar away for cat meat, while the stranger took from his pocket a golden rule and handed it to John with the remark:

"Now run along, sonny, and every thing you touch shall turn to gold. Remember that, while the liar may prosper and grow fat for a time, the truthful hyena will come out on top in the long run."

While this is also a true story, I have concealed the true names of the principal characters in it, but they can be had by sending your address with a stamp to pay return postage.

THE CRY OF MILLIONS
OH, MY BACK!
STOP IT NOW,
SOON IT WILL BE TOO LATE.

I have been troubled many years with disease of the kidneys and have tried many different remedies and have sought aid from different physicians without relief. About the 15th of April I was suffering from a very violent attack that almost prostrated me in such a manner that I was bent over. When I sat down it was almost impossible for me to get up alone, or to put on my clothes, when God Providence sent Dr. Henley, with the OREGON KIDNEY TEA, to my hotel. I immediately commenced using the tea. It had an almost miraculous effect, and to the astonishment of all the guests at the hotel, in a few days, I am happy to state, that I was a new man. I will recommend the tea to all afflicted as I have been.

REGARDING POCKETS.

Difficult Things for Tailors and Dress-Makers to Handle Well.

The present pocket, both for ladies and gentlemen, is an extremely difficult feature to make thoroughly well, both in dress-making and in tailoring, says the London Telegraph. There is a story of an English couturiere who thought that she had all but perfected herself in the art of dress-making, but who took a trip to Paris in order to go through a final course of instruction in the atelier of a celebrated robe-artiste. She paid a handsome fee for a year's instruction, and after signing articles she was put to what seemed to her the frivolous task of inserting a pocket in a dress. When she had finished her task "madame" shook her head with kindly gravity and told her articled pupil that the mystery of pocket-making had yet to be learned. It is a fact that the devoted student was kept for six whole months toiling at pockets; at the expiration of that period she was permitted to try her hand at sleeves, and she returned to England a sadder but wiser seamstress, destined, however, it is to be hoped, to blossom into a court dress-maker of the grandest type.

As with ladies' pockets so is it in degree with those of gentlemen. Mankind desires its trousers pockets, its coat and overcoat and vest pockets to be conveniently placed, easy of access and not given to getting unsewn. To be perfect they should be entirely unobtrusive. The Emperor Alexander I., of Russia, when he was in Paris, was desirous of having his nether garments made by a famous "culottier," who had supplied Napoleon with his buckskins. "But the pockets?" said the Emperor, when the tailor had finished measuring him. "I am sure," replied the "culottie," "that I should not know where to put pockets unless I cut them in your Majesty's flesh." The Czar was more amused than angered by the explanation. "But the other one, Napoleon," he pursued, "what did he do for breeches pockets?" "His aides-de-camp were his pockets," replied with quiet dignity the small-clothes artist.

Later breeches-makers may have thought out some means of maintaining symmetry while providing pockets in buckskins or cords, but, speaking broadly, the resources of the tailor are taxed to the very utmost in designing pockets which shall hold what a gentleman requires without pushing themselves into objectionable prominence. There are a great many things that we are bound to find room for in our pockets. Happily, we are absolved from the necessity of carrying revolvers beneath our garments, but it frequently happens that a small silver flask, holding some form of alcohol, occupies a modest place in a traveler's pocket, and of course he must have due receptacles for his cigar-case, his keys, his handkerchief, and, if he be well stricken in the vale of years, his spectacles. It is only the entirely-competent and long-experienced coat artist who knows how these pockets shall be placed and what shall be their exact breadth and depth. Thus to the practiced sartorial eye a breast-pocket really appear "ridiculous." It may be the eighth of an inch too high, too low, too narrow or too broad. It may be "too straight in the fore part," or just a hair's breadth too much askew for symmetry or for comfort; but it is a a pity that the estimable artists in coats can not settle their estimable little difference without bringing the refinements of their craft into the law courts.

TO ERADICATE WARTS.

Some of the Many Superstitions About Getting Rid of Them.

"Warts!" exclaimed the oracle to the presiding member of the oyster cracker convention in a Main street grocery store in Lewiston Saturday. "I've had 'em. Yes, sir, I've had 'em, but I charmed 'em away."

After this statement, says the Lewiston (Me.) Journal, the members of the convention fell into silence, considering the departed warty days of youth. "If a man will write down the number of warts that he has on his hands on the hat-band of a tramp without the tramp knowing it the latter will carry the warts away with him," suggested George William, the elderly oracle on warts, after a long silence. "Warts used to give in," he continued, "when you cut one notch on a green elder stick for every wart you had and then rubbed the stick on each wart and then buried it in the barnyard until it rots. That fixes 'em. Take a black snail, rub him on the warts and then stick him on a thorn bush. Do this nine successive nights and the snails and the warts will be dead together."

"Chalk marks on the stove funnel used to fix my warts," said the chairman of the meeting. "Get 'em on when nobody could see you and when they disappeared the warts went too. This used to get sort of mixed when my mother saw the chalk marks and wiped 'em off. When I used to see a funeral go by unexpectedly I used to rub the warts up and down and say: 'Warts and corpses pass away and never more return.' That was intended to fix 'em."

"Charming warts was the popular way in my day," said the minister. "A man of elderly mien and sad features was the king of charmers. I went to him surreptitiously one day and he looked me in the eyes and said something that sounded like 'wobbly, gobbly, gum,' and a lot more of the same interesting description. I've forgotten whether the warts went or not. We used to think that to take as many pebbles as we had warts, tough them to the excrescences, sew them in a bag, take them to the four corners of the cross-roads and throw the bag over the left shoulder, would do the business. The only bad feature about this was that if any person should find the bag and open it he would reap the warty treasure of the bag."

A GYPSY ON DREAMS.

Read This, Then Go Home and Eat Too Much Cheese or Pound Cake.

According to the Gypsy, to dream that you bathe in clear water is a sign that you will enjoy good health; if muddy, the death of relatives or friends. To see a bath, anger; to take a warm bath denotes happiness; if you take one either too hot or too cold, domestic troubles. If you undress without going into the water you may expect trouble, but it will soon pass away; a sea bath is a sign of honor and increase of fortune.

If any one dreams that he or she is ascending to heaven, or is already enjoying its delights, it shows that some joyful event is to happen, such as the birth of an heir to childless people, good fortune to those who are poor, distinction to the wealthy and high honors to the ambitious. If lovers have such a dream it foretells an early marriage under the most auspicious circumstances, and that their wedding will be attended with troops of congratulating friends, who will shower presents upon them. On the other hand, to dream of seeing hell denotes that the dreamer's life is a bad one, and is an intimation to him of reformation.

To see a coffin in your dreams signifies that you will soon be married and own a house of your own. This is a dream girls are always wishing for, says the Gypsy book.

If any one should be so unfortunate as to dream that he or she was present at a happy and jolly wedding it denotes that they will attend a funeral; it will not necessarily be at the burial of either of the persons you dreamed you saw married, but you will undoubtedly be called to mourn some friend or relative. To go to weddings when one is wide awake is exceedingly pleasant, but we should be careful how we dream about them. To dream of being married yourself foretells your death.

For a girl to dream of raking newly-mown hay is a sign she will be married before the hay is eaten. Young fellows who dream of raking hay with their sweethearts had better get ready their necks for the matrimonial noose, as they are past praying for. If a man dreams he is confined in a prison or jail it shows that he will have honors or dignities conferred upon him, as such dreams go contrarywise; if his arrest and imprisonment worries him it only shows that he will be the more delighted with his new dignities. This is an excellent dream for politicians and office-holders, as the jail is what they would naturally dream of.

For a girl to dream that she was so sleepy in church as to nod toward the minister, is a sign she will have a young parson for her husband; if a young man dreams this, he will be apt to make up to the minister's daughter, provided his position warrants it, and if not, that he will marry a girl noted for her piety. To dream of a widow signifies a reward; to dream you are a widow portends death or disappointment. To dream of a widower denotes strife and quarrels.

A fox is a sign of thieves; to dream of fighting with them shows that you will have to deal with some cunning enemy; keep a tame fox signifies that you a lewd woman, or have a bad servant who will rob you. A number of foxes, false friends. If you dream that your mouth is stopped by a gag, it denotes that you will soon thereafter be kissed by a pretty girl. To a young girl such a dream predicts that she will see some gentleman who takes her fancy, and perhaps will fall in love with him.

If you dream you are pleased with a pretty chambermaid, milkmaid or any clean or nice-looking young girl whose occupation carries with it the title of maid, it is a good omen, for it predicts an excellent match and plenty of children. It also foretells, in many cases, that the dreamer will marry a rich wife. For a married woman to dream this is a sign she will have trouble with servants.

WILD WESTERN JUSTICE.

Why a Tough Citizen Failed to Keep His Appointment.

In one of the frontier settlements in the Wild West a German cobbler was elected police justice. His reputation as an honest toiler was well established, but his legal knowledge and sense of humor were so far of unknown quantities.

One of his first cases was that of a tough citizen who was duly arraigned for a breach of the peace. The justice heard the evidence in the case and pronounced sentence of three months in jail. This so enraged the defendant that he ended a vigorous abuse of the court by promising to call on him promptly that day three months and prepare him for a first-class funeral. The judge heard this abuse silently, and then, without any emotion, cogitated as follows:

"Vell, you kills me to-day three months ago, vill you? Let me see: This is August first. Three months vill be November first. Thanksgiving vill be twenty-fifth. I vill miss my Thanksgiving dinner. Christmas is next. I vill miss Christmas, too. Six months from August first vill be Shanuary. I makes it six months, und den you kills me, vill it? You shust go right avay to jail six months, and then I see you any more I shoust shoot you so full of lead it vill take von steam derrick to lift you down to your grave. You hear me?"

The six months were up long ago, and the justice still sits upon his cobbler's bench when not dispensing justice from his official seat. The tough citizen is presumably herding cattle in Arizona.

NELSON MAILS.

The Spokane and Northern Offer to Carry the B. C. Mail Free.

The mining camps in the Kootenay Lake country, among several grievances count the wretched mail facilities not the least. Replying to a Nelson merchant the president of the Spokane Falls & Northern Railway Co. writes:—

DEAR SIR,—Replying to your letter of the 19th instant, I say: In the absence of steamer connection at Little Dallas this winter, it is not likely that this company will run regular trains to that point. I expect and intend to have a satisfactory connection with your country next spring, but that does not help you in the matter of obtaining mails this winter. I desire to say, however, that I shall be glad to carry your mail from here to Marcus during the winter months without any charge whatever, if you can make this suit your convenience. In this case it would be necessary for you to arrange to have a sack here that could be locked, I suppose. There will be quite a number of people wintering at Trail Creek, who will need some mail facilities, and it would seem that some arrangement could be made with that camp and Sproat by which the mail could be taken from Marcus through to Nelson. Anyway, I will carry your mail from here to Marcus without any charge, if it will accommodate your people.

D. C. CORBIN.

The Miner adds: Now that the Dominion postoffice authorities have called for tenders to carry a semi-monthly mail between Bonner's Ferry and Nelson, it is of little use attempting to make any arrangements whatever with Mr. Corbin's road. The people at Trail creek may be able to raise a sum sufficient to give them a monthly mail by way of Marcus, but those at Sproat will probably get their mail matter by way of Nelson. In any event, Mr. Corbin's offer shows a willingness to help our people out in the difficulty.

KOCH'S GREAT REMEDY.

Interesting Lecture on Its Use and Efficacy by Professors.

BERLIN, Nov. 19.—Prof. Gerhardt in explaining Koch's treatment to an audience of many foreign physicians exhibited three typical cases. The first was one of aggravated tuberculosis. An injection of two milligrams of the lymph was made yesterday. To-day there was a decided reaction and a cure was expected. The second case was one of phthisis. The treatment already shows signs of marked success. In the third case an injection was made as an aid to the diagnosis. No reaction occurred, and it is assumed that the disease is not tuberculosis.

When fresh supplies of lymph are prepared they will be distributed first to the hospitals in Berlin, next throughout Germany, then in Vienna, Paris and London, and next to private practitioners.

Dr. Franklin's lecture on the same subject mentioned one death as having occurred, it is supposed from an overdose of lymph. He cited other cases as very successful. The bacilli dwindle and become crooked, their extremities swell, they disintegrate and are converted into strings of minute globes. Even at this stage watchfulness is necessary to prevent the bacteria from resuming their activity.

CONSERVATIVES VS. RADICALS.

The Hamilton Spectator is now published as an evening paper, and, says the Vancouver Telegram, "it is one of the best and most reliable Conservative papers in Canada." In this estimate of the Spectator we concur, but we cannot help interjecting that good Conservative papers in Canada, like good Democratic papers in the United States, are few and scattering. The disparity in point of intellectual vigor between Conservative and Liberal papers and between Republican and Democratic papers is one of the queer features of North American journalism. The Conservatives have really but one oracle, while those of the Democrats may be counted on the fingers of one hand. There is not a Democratic paper in all New England that has more than local standing. In New York there are some excellent Democratic newspapers, but the utterances of the Sun are most quoted, and that is a sort of nondescript sheet. In the Middle, Southern and Western States, there is not to exceed four Democratic papers whose political utterances are recognized as authority, and of these, probably, WATTERSON'S Journal is the flower of the flock. On the Pacific coast Democratic oracles are conspicuous by their absence. There are several good Democratic newspapers, but none of them carry the weight of some half a dozen Republican papers that might be mentioned. The Examiner has not yet attained the pitch of an oracle although hundreds of thousands of dollars have been expended to make it a newspaper. In Portland no Democratic paper has yet been able to make head against the sledge hammer logic of the Oregonian. In Canada, as has been observed, the journalistic conditions are about the same. Practically there is but one Conservative paper in Canada that deals with the policy of its party and with current events in a manner at once dispassionate and philosophic. How are we to account for so curious a state of affairs in journalism? It is impossible to account for it except upon the hypothesis that the keenest and broadest intellects irresistibly tend toward radicalism. The constitution of mind which admits of the reception of ideas with due appreciation of their significance in relation to progress refuses to be confined to the circumscribed limits of conservatism. It is not in the nature of things that Conservative organs should be as numerous as influential and as popular as their radical contemporaries in which we have mockers at tradition and the exemplification of effort to attain the ideal.

THE TORIES AND McKINLEYISM.

The alleged statement of the London Times, to the effect, "that Great Britain would not blame Canada if the latter threw her lot commercially with the United States" is now shown to be a forgery. The language of the Times, it appears, was a paraphrase of a passage of WIMAN's Niagara speech.

The following are WIMAN's remarks:

"But if the Congress of the United States should express a willingness to extend to the North an invitation to reciprocal arrangements similar to that which, in their new tariff just enacted, they have extended to Southern nationalities, the people of Great Britain must not blame Canada if she accepts this first omen of better relations hereafter to exist between the English speaking nations that hold this vast continent in common."

In its editorial columns the Times gave a summary of Mr. WIMAN'S speech, paraphrasing the sentence just quoted thus:

"But if Congress should hold out the hand of reciprocity, the people of Great Britain must not blame the Canadians if they succumb to the temptation."

Then it proceeded to reply to Mr. WIMAN:

"As to this, all we can say is that there seems very little chance, judging by the sentiments lately expressed by Canadian Ministers and Canadians generally, that Canada will swallow the golden bait. The McKinley Act has had precisely the reverse effect in Canada to that which the Americans intended."

It may be observed in this connection that Canadian Tories are egregiously stupid in their present attitude in relation to trade relations with the States. They hold that commercial reciprocity would eventuate in Canada's severance from England, and yet on the other hand they are tireless in their condemnation of McKinleyism. They demand that commercial isolation from the States shall be maintained, and on the other hand they curse the United States for its illiberal trade policy. Was there ever an attitude more inconsistent than this? Say the Tories, "We do not want reciprocity." "Very good," reply the United States, "let us increase the tariff, then, and make isolation complete." Here the United States play directly into the hands of the Tories, but the latter return this kindness with a blow. We have frequently pointed out in this paper that McKinleyism was an endorsement of National Policy; that it was a distinct negation of the desire of the States to absorb Canada through the operation of commercial relations, but for all that England is displeased with it and Sir JOHN MACDONALD berated it in his Halifax speech, not in the language of a statesman, but with the rhetoric of a stump orator. If, as the Tories fear, commercial relations with the States would have the effect of making Canada disloyal, what kind of a cry might we expect from them in the event of the United States throwing down the tariff wall? It seems to us that if trade relations with the States would have the effect of making Canada disloyal, the only course open to the London Times and the Empire is to support McKinleyism with all the power of their might.

STANLEY AND LIVINGSTONE.

"As usual," says the Mail, "CHAUNCEY M. DEPEW's silver tongue ran away with him when he was talking about STANLEY at the first lecture of the explorer on Tuesday. He said STANLEY had "covered himself with glory." No impartial observer of events can doubt that he has also covered himself with a cloud of doubt, not to say suspicion, which is anything but glorious. STANLEY is not so great a man as LIVINGSTONE, and never will be." Had STANLEY failed through impractical sentimentalism none would be so poor as to do him reverence. Shall the lustre of STANLEY's fame be tarnished because the "rear column" was commanded by a maniac? LIVINGSTON was a good man with a fad for exploration, but here we must stop. He subordinated exploration to the susceptibilities of barbarians. Had he spent as much time in exploring and fighting as in negotiating, we should never have heard of STANLEY. He would have anticipated STANLEY's discoveries by several years. No morbid sentimentalist has any business in Africa as an explorer. STANLEY may not be as good a man as LIVINGSTON, but he is the greater.

PLATFORM OF THE INDEPENDENTS AS LAID DOWN BY THE NEWS.

The News asks us to explain our attempt to get the Independents to enunciate the policy they propose to pursue. The News asks the wrong question. The News intimated, or at least we thought it did, that it was the policy of the Independents to permit themselves to be reflected through the Government. What we want to know, therefore, is, why should they adopt such a policy? If the Government stands discredited with the Independents, and we assume such to be the case, else whence the origin of the Independents, how does it come about that they should consent to be reflected through the Government? Of course, if the Independents elect to be reflected through the Government that is their business, but it seems to us that they can only do so at the expense of stultification. The incompetency of the Government has been illustrated in many ways, and no paper in the province has set it forth in a more lurid light than the News. Will the News compound with these fellows? Does the News propose to give and take with them? Does the News propose to merge its individuality with men who legislate only to blunder and who but for orders-in-council would have swamped the country long ago? In the matter of this "tempting" business, originating in the vacuous sensibility of a contemporary, such is furthermost from our thoughts. The News, however, wants to bear this in mind. It can accomplish nothing without the aid of the Opposition, unless it so happen that the Government should be uncommonly complaisant. The Government majority, as figured out by the Columbian, a no mean judge, is large enough to insure them practically their own way. Hence we have it that the Independents cannot accomplish a solitary reform without conceding something to the Government. Now the News would decentralize the schools, "Honest JOHN" would not. How is the News going to accomplish this reform? We might propound a good many questions to the News in point of the accomplishment of certain reforms which must provoke a direct issue between it and the Government, but we refrain for the present. Without affiliating with the Opposition, however, we are at a loss to understand how the News proposes to effect reforms that "Honest JOHN" is bound in consistency to oppose to the bitter end.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

If, remarks the Witness, Great Britain cedes Gambia to France the French should hand over St. Pierre and Miquelon to Newfoundland. The French have no territorial rights on the Newfoundland coast, and consequently the cession of territory to them for merely surrendering certain fishery privileges will amount to a gift and not an exchange. If Newfoundland consents to renounce the bait act, France ought to be required to reciprocate by removing the bounties system. In any case the British Government should conclude no agreement without securing the adhesion to it of the Newfoundland Government, and requiring that before being final it shall receive the consent of the Newfoundland Legislature.

Gen. GREELY's report on the operations of the weather bureau at Washington during the past fiscal year has just been published. It contains some interesting information on the subject of tornadoes. Prof. HAZEN, who has had charge of the work of investigating these phenomena, divides them into three classes: First, violent storms causing destruction; third, the most severe tornadoes; and, in the second-class, all other known violent storms. There have been in the past eighteen years about one thousand tornadoes in each of the first two classes, the number causing the death of 1071 persons and a loss of about $13,000,000 in property. The third class comprises the most violent atmospheric disturbances of this description. Of these there have been fifty-eight, killing 755 people and destroying property to the amount of $11,894,700.

Oporto is the Portuguese town which displayed the worst form of Anglophobia during the recent troubles. Its people refused to buy English goods, it is said, and proposed that their importation be entirely prohibited. A peculiar style of hats appeared in the shops at the time of the height of the madness which was called the "Serpa Pinto, or Down with the English," a name which was attached by a label stuck in the crown. Thousands of these hats were bought and sported on the streets during a week or two, and then it was discovered that they were the manufacture of an enterprising English firm which had made them popular by having a taking label printed for them. English firms were boycotted and the English Consuls residence was in danger until English men-of-war arrived off the mouth of the Douro, and an English gunboat lay in readiness at the wharves to take off the English council, when the furore of the citizens suddenly abated. Now the Portuguese Government has taken its turn at shutting out foreign trade by prohibiting the importation of foreign wheat and the Oporto mills are closed, so that the people of that patriotic town will be compelled to pay dearly for that sort of folly. Better, however, be thus convinced than by war.

The Toronto world editorially describes an electric launch large enough to carry 25 persons. "The motive power," says the world, occupies a very small space in the stern, while on each side under the seats are arranged 58 cells, which are connected by wires with the motor. The machine is of 3-horse power and capable of working up to 4½. This ensures at full speed nine knots an hour. The cost of running the launch is 20 cents an hour, and the supply stored was sufficient for ten hours. When exhausted the batteries can be re-charged at any electric light station. For charging the cost would be only $2. In other words, the propelling power only costs twenty cents an hour. The storage batteries take the place of ballast. The World is of the opinion that the electrical mode of propulsion, both in small and large craft will displace steam power. Whether JULES VERNE's ship will ever be realized is a question, but this much is certain, electricty for the propulsion of pleasure craft stored as above described ought to add immensely to their popularity. Electric craft are cleaner, smell sweeter and there is no danger of the boiler blowing up. The battreies once charged and the motive power turned on the machine does the rest. He who can get up cheap pleasure craft of this sort should have no difficulty in finding plenty of customers.

Notwithstanding the denial of railway officials that they are responsible for the wheat blockade in Eastern Washington; circumstances point in a contrary direction. Fewer cars are being furnished this year than was the case a year ago, and to further lend color to the charge that the railways are acting in the interest of the wheat ring, it is pointed out that at St. Paul there are thousands of cars lying idle. But whether the railways are responsible or not for the blockade the situation brings home to the farmers a realization of their powerlessness and they are now organizing for the purpose of building a railway of their own. It is pointed out that the freights alone on the grain raised in Whitman county this season will amount to $5,000,000 if shipped to Puget Sound or Portland, and about $7,000,000 if billed to St. Paul or Chicago. Five or six million dollars, the Alliance argues, will go a long way towards completing the proposed road. The singular feature of the whole business is, that while the leading newspapers are full of denials that the blockade is the result of design, not one of them undertake to explain why and how it is that the railway companies have fewer cars in use formerly.

CARD TO THE PUBLIC.

TO THE EDITOR:—Noticing in Thursday's issue of the TIMES a complaint of the deputation of merchants, re itinerant auctioneers, we would state that an establishment for the sale of goods by private and auction is conducted by us, which the public, owing to the good quality of the wares sold, have seen fit to liberally patronize. We have received consignments of the best lines of goods procurable, and have sold nothing that can be termed trash or "Cheap John" goods, nor do we invite trade of that class. There are, of course, a few men in business in our fair city who would monopolize everything to the detriment of the people at large, and in truth want "the earth" to satisfy them, and whimper like a spanked kid because they cannot have it. The building we occupy is rented by us for as long as there is a roof above us, and we have paid $50 for two months' license, in January will again be taxed $50 more for current six months, and if this is not paying for our privilege, would like to know why. Lastly, we are residents of the city, and are here to stay. MORTIMER & CO.,

BEACON HILL PARK.

TO THE EDITOR:—I notice in your report of the proceedings at the city council board last evening that the Mayor reported that he had been asked by several gentlemen that a small portion of Beacon Hill Park be reserved for polo grounds, and that the matter had been referred to a committee. Would it not be advisable that the council consider this question in all its bearings, ere they, by granting such a request, make a precedent that may eventuate in that glorious place of public resort being cut up and divided into numerous play grounds for the use of the various clubs and societies that have existence amongst us? For should this request be granted there can be no just refusal given to any other parties applying for a like concession; and the more so for the reason, that while cricket, lacrosse, baseball and football may be almost designated as national games, or at least games in which all ages and conditions may participate, polo is pre-eminently a game that can be indulged in only by the few, and those few, persons of wealth.

Now without being acquainted with the conditions upon which Beacon Hill became a public park, I submit on general principles, that the park is the property of the public, for recreation, etc., and for the public as a whole only, and not parts or parties of the public; and that the Mayor and Corporation, as elected representatives, are guardians of the peoples' rights in the property, to beautify, improve and protect, and to hand down to future generations these rights and privileges untrammelled either by lease or lien, or curtailment in the shape of special privileges.

The concession asked for may seem a slight one, I admit; but it is a well-known fact that privileges of this sort are soon claimed as rights; and the setting apart of a portion of Beacon Hill Park for the benefit of a few persons would be but the fore-runner of a curtailment of that beautiful resort to a few pathways in a short time, for how could the Council consistently refuse to any future applicants like privileges when requested?

By all means save to us Beacon Hill. As the city grows and spreads out its arms of bricks and mortar, the open spaces within it will be none too plentiful, and that beautiful hill will remain an oasis where the visitor, the people of leisure, and the tired worker, may inhale health and strength and recuperate wearied body and mind. Go on improving and beautifying, but do not alienate one foot of the grand domain the wisdom of those who secured it to the public procured for us. The question of the foreshore right at James Bay, which lately was under discussion, is a specimen of how a piece of good-natured thoughtlessness will sometimes be the cause of endless trouble and litigation.

In conclusion, I would respectfully suggest that, seeing that the game of polo is merely an amusement of the few, and that the land upon which it is played is so cut up and destroyed as to be unfitted for anything like recreation grounds, the lovers of that game follow the example of the Caledonian and other societies and provide themselves with a play ground, either by purchase or lease, and thus have the opportunity of indulging in the penchant without encroachment on the rights of the public. A CITIZEN.

SPORTING NOTES.

Brief Resume of Sporting Matters Here and There.

A FAMOUS COURSE SOLD.

All that was left of the Maryland Jockey club has been sold by auction at a price far below the real value of the property. It consisted of five acres of land adjoining the track at Pimlico; the fine club house under whose roof nearly every prominent turfman in the country had found shelter, and all the stables. The appointments in the club house were included in the sale. Ex-Governor Bowie had charge of the business, he having been instructed by the jockey club to dispose of the property to the best advantage. The ground was originally bought for $5,000. The club house cost $10,000, the appointments about $5,000, and the stables about $2,000. Notwithstanding every exertion on the part of the auctioneer, the highest obtainable bid was $5,200 for the whole business, and at this price it was sold to Mr. Charles Pitts, a local merchant, who openly stated that he bought it on speculation. The Jockey club people are very angry at themselves for not accepting of the offer of $10,000 made by Frank Brown, of the Maryland Agricultural association, about a year ago. At this time the two organizations were at war, and Governor Bowie stuck to $12,500. He expected Mr. Brown to bid on the property, but, much to the chagrin of the Jockey club, Hople, his representative, made no offer. Should Mr. Pitts and the Maryland Agricultural association fail to come to an agreement about the property, it is very probable that the famous course will be divided by a big fence. This division will not affect the track. Mr. Brown says there will be running races at Pimlico next spring, and that the horses entered will represent leading stables.

TO-MORROW'S PAPER CHASE.

The usual weekly paper chase will start to-morrow at 2:30 from the residence of Hon. C. E. Pooley, and will make an entirely new route. Good sport is anticipated.

WINNERS AND LOSERS.

Everybody hears of the lucky speculators, but the unlucky one is satisfied to remain in obscurity, unless he is so unfortunate as to fall into the hands of the sheriff. Here are the leading winners on the turf this season and a few of the heavy losers:

Lucien O. Appleby, the New York bookmaker, is accounted the heaviest winner of the year. A conservative estimate places him $150,000 ahead of the game. Edmund Botay leads the Western plungers, and his system playing, in which he employs three assistants, has netted him over $100,000 in the last six months. He is credited with winning $25,000 at the recent Latonia meeting. David T. Pulsifer, formerly of Chicago, played in his usual luck. In spite of his tremendous losses on Tenny in the Suburban and in the match with Salvator he got it all back and at least $125,000 more. Pulsifer is one of the very heaviest betters, and on the success of the Flutter filly grabbed $46,000 out of the ring at Gravesend.

George Wheelock lost $75,000 in the spring but is now $100,000 winner. Kilk Gunn and Cy Jones, of Chicago, are $30,000 ahead of the horses. "Pittsburg" Phil is $60,000 to the good, and Byron McClelland has won a like sum on his filly Sallie McClelland.

Among the heavy losers are: Pierre Lorillard and J. E. Kittson, the millionaire turfman; Harry Haswell, Abe Garson, Mayor Grant, of New York; J. N. Crusins, Fred Dele and J. E. Cavanaugh.

Some of the heaviest plungers in the country contributed to the success of the winners. Mike Dwyer, the strongest dealer in horse futures of the century, is out more than anybody can estimate. Bookmaker De Lacy admits his losses could have purchased the handsomest brown stone front in New York, and Tom Childs has run in the same class. George Forbes, the Canadian horseman, was badly squeezed through a false system he adopted, and Dave Johnson, was rich one day and poor the next. Probably the heaviest loser in the country is Eoli Pearsall. The Saratoga meeting alone cost him $90,000. Joe Maroon, a New York contractor, brought $100,000 on the turf in the spring and is flat broke. "Dink" Davis, the big gambler, hasn't a penny, although he flew in his usual high style during the summer. Included in the list of well-known betting men, who gained experience at considerable cost, were: Bookmaker Sam Emery, Marcus Cartwright, who lost $25,000 two weeks ago at West Side Park; Percy Gillis, John Daly, Charley Davis, Ridge Leveir, Eddie Lewis, a believer in "information"; Phil Grill, who backed the favorite in a race won by his own horse, Wilfred, at odds of 100 to 1: Chas. Jordon, Walter Gratz and Abe Hummell, the famous New York lawyer. Among the heavy losers in Europe is the Prince of Wales, who plunged heavily in one or two meetings.

FOOTBALL.

The Victoria football club have accepted the challenge of the Nanaimo team to play here on Christmas day.

B.C. AGAINST THE WORLD (RUGBY).

An interesting game will be played at the Hill to-morrow by a team of British Columbians against all comers. Arrangements are being made for matches against Vancouver and New Westminster, and it is hoped that every player will turn out for the practice to-morrow afternoon. Play commences at 3 p.m.

LAST OPPORTUNITY.

Mr. Seward, the Eminent N.Y. Optician, Preparing to Leave for Home.

Having faithfully promised to be in New York by Christmas, and being obliged to stop for a few days at Portland, Denver, St. Louis, Cincinatti and Washington, Mr. Seward will leave Victoria

The prospects are that Mr. Seward will not have time to finish all the work now in sight, before leaving, but if all those intending to call will do so without further delay, he will make the test and finish what he can and send the balance from New York.

Mr. Seward's success has been complete. Hundreds of Victorians have been benefited by his superior skill in adapting glasses, and no failures have been reported.

Mr. Seward's services are in great demand wherever he goes, and it will probably be several years before he will reach this coast again.

DR. BULMER TALKS,

Not the Man Wanted by an Anxious Wife—A Crow to Pick With Other Doctors.

Some days ago a letter was received by superintendent of police Sheppard of this city, making enquiries of a missing Dr. Bulmer. The letter was as follows:

Oct. 14th, 1890.

To Chief Constable of Police:—

"SIR.—I have been advised by police authorities here to apply to you for information upon the subject of my husband, Dr. Bulmer, who left England May 3rd, 1890, for Victoria City, arriving there by Pacific Railway. Put up at the Clarence hotel, corner Yates and Douglas streets, W. C. Anderson, proprietor, from whence a letter was sent same night with promise of a letter following in a week. Not having received any tidings since, I fear some mishap has occurred to him, and I should feel truly grateful if you could find out and forward to me his address. Dr. Bulmer is about 5 feet 8, rather stout, bald on the top of the head, writes with his left hand, having had the right hand slightly twisted, but still quite useful to him. He also possesses a great flow of language. I am, sir, yours respectfully,

MRS CLARA BULMER,
Sidcup Rise, Sidcup, Kent, Eng.

This letter was also supplemented by another addressed to a high official, by whom it was handed to the police. The facts of these letters must have leaked out some days ago, for a dispatch from this city appeared in a Seattle paper referring to the matter.

These letters created some enquiries, and to-day a TIMES reporter visited No. 152 Douglas street, where Thomas S. Bulmer, M. D., C.M., resides. The reporter found Dr. Bulmer in, and the news man stated that he had called in the interest of the paper he represented, to find out if this was the Dr. Bulmer for whom enquiries had been sent by Mrs. Clara Bulmer to the Superintendent of Police.

Dr. Bulmer replied that he had no wife in England, that his wife now lived here in Victoria, to whom he had been marrted some months ago. She was not from Vancouver as stated in a Seattle paper, having come from Sydney, N. S. Wales.

"Then the letter of enquiry must be in relation to some other Dr. Bulmer?" said the reporter.

"It must be, as there is no woman in England who has a right to call me her husband," replied Dr. Bulmer.

"Then you have no knowledge of the writer of this letter?" asked the reporter, producing a copy of the original one received by Supt. Sheppard.

"Well, I lived with a woman there once, but she has no claim on me. I think the whole thing is a conspiracy. Anybody can write such a letter. You might get one yourself. The whole trouble is that the examiners of the medical council have been exposed by me, and Milne and Hannington are trying to ruin me, but they can't. You know I exposed the B. C. Medical Council in the English papers, and showed how rotten it was, and now they want to keep me down, but they can't. Why I exposed their ignorance in the TIMES only the other day. There is also a lot of Freemasonry jealousy mixed up in it, and I shall take measures to have them dealt with by their lodges."

I shall go after Milne and shall charge him with aiding, abetting and circulating slander about me. I shall also have the best lawyer in Seattle instructed to proceed against the Seattle paper. You see they tried to prosecute me up the country, and summoned me for practising my profession, but I beat them. They robbed me, too. I gave them $100 when I went up to be examined, and they only gave me $50 back after rejecting me. They are robbers.

"Do you think that there can be another Dr. Bulmer, who may be the one wanted, and the one meant in the Seattle papers?" asked the reporter.

"More than likely there is. Of course it can't be me. I never resided in Seattle; I was only there twelve hours. My wife don't come from Vancouver. She comes from Sydney."

Here the doctor called in a lady, who in answer to a question put by him said she had never been in Vancouver. The lady also said that the trouble must have arisen over a similarity of names.

The reporter having heard all that Dr. Bulmer had to say concerning the letters and the telegraphic dispatches, took his leave.

Caning on the Hand.

A father sued an English schoolmaster for assault because he had caned his boy on the hand. The magistrate before whom it was first tried thought that the father was right, for the reason that caning on the hand was attended by a risk of injury, and there were "methods of corporal punishment quite as available, efficacious and not necessarily attended with any risk which the defendant might have used." The higher court, though, decided that it was not actionable.

What a Knot Means.

Comparatively few newspaper readers know, or have any special reason to know, that a knot is more than a mile, and that six of the former equal about seven of the latter. Accurately speaking, there are 6,086.7 feet in a knot and 5,280 feet in a mile.

Secret Divorce in Colorado.

Colorado is one of the States wherein the "secret divorce" flourishes. Hundreds of them are granted in Arapahoe County alone each year. Instead of seeking to stem the flood, the Legislature every session increases its volume, until the "secret divorce" in Colorado may now be said to have assumed the dimensions of a torrent.

THE WIDE TIRES' ACT

DECLARED CONSTITUTIONAL BY CHIEF JUSTICE.

Sir Matthew Baillie Begbie's Judgment—He Fines the Defendant $10 on Each of Two Charges, and Says the Law Cannot Be Successfully Impeached.

The case of the Crown vs. Howe and McNeil vs. Howe, upon two indictments for in fractions of the Wide Tire Act were declared in favor of the crown by the chief justice yesterday, his lordship declaring the act constitutional, and imposing a penalty of $10 and costs for each case.

The Attorney-General represented the crown and Mr. Charles Wilson the defence.

Sir M. B. Begbie gave judgment, as follows: These were two actions for penalties under the Wide Tires' Act, 1889, c. 22, the first brought by the Attorney-General for one offence against the Act, the other by a private prosecutor for a distinct offence on a different day.

The Statute (passed 16th April, 1889, but not coming into force until October 1, 1890,) forbids the carrying of any load of more than 2,000 pounds in any wagon on any of the highways in Victoria district, unless the tires be at least four inches in width.

The first question upon which I was asked to give an opinion was whether a private prosecutor might sue. The negative was scarcely contended for, and it seems quite clear that he may. Sec. 4 of the act (c. 22, 1889,) says: "One-half of the penalty recovered under this act shall be paid to the informer, &c." This inevitably implies that an informer may bring the action, and successfully; otherwise no penalty would be there to be dealt with. And, besides, the Interpretation of Statutes (C. A. 1888, c. 1, sec. 8, subs. 23) is express: "Whenever any penalty * * is imposed by any Act, then, if no other mode be prescribed for the recovery thereof, it shall be recovered with costs in any civil action (either) at the suit of the Crown only or (at the suit) of any private party suing as well for the Crown as for himself," etc.

The defendant admits the contravention of the Act in each case. And the only question really argued before me was as to the constitutionality of the Wide Tires' Act.

Mr. Wilson, for the defendant, relied on two grounds only, I think. First, that this was a direct attempt to "regulate" the "trade" of a carrier, and so a direct usurpation of a subject matter which, by the British North America Act, sec. 91, sub-sec. 2, is expressly reserved to the Dominion Parliament. And, in the next place, that it was an interference, not with all trades, nor in all parts of the province, but only with one trade and in one particular district of the province; that it is, therefore, unequal in incidence of those engaged in carrying, and repugnant to natural justice and void.

But it was answered by the Attorney-General that such exceptional legislation is continually met with. That different and special powers are given to many of the various municipalities within the province, and different powers of taxation (i. e., imposing burdens) on persons dwelling within the province, and of imposing discriminating burdens upon persons pursuing different avocations in the same municipality, all which legislation, pressing unequally, would be a mere nullity, according to the defendant's present argument. Moreover, the question to be considered is not the justice or expediency of the enactment, but its constitutionality. If this were a mere by-law, the court might examine whether it was reasonable or equitable; but an act of the legislature is not liable to be treated as a nullity on such grounds. At least there is no modern authority for that view, but very much against it. And then, on the main ground, it was denied by the prosecution that this is an attempt to regulate "trade or commerce" within the meaning of sec. 91, subs. 2. Even if these words properly understood, could include the carriage for profit along a few miles of road, all that the act says is, "you shall not carry certain weights except on certain tires." It is not addressed to carriers only—every person, whether trading or not, must have tires of the legal width. The same sort of regulation repeatedly occurs with respect to houses in towns, forbidding them to be built except of certain materials—the carrying on trades only on payment of varying licenses—the driving of carts in the street, only at certain rates of speed—and a great many of such matters, which may all be said to aim at the regulation of trade and commerce at least as much as the Wide Tires' Act, 1889. But in fact this matter is not part of the "trade and commerce" mentioned in sec. 92, subs 2, which was not intended to comprise such matters as in the words of sec. 92, sub. sec 16, are merely of a local character; all such being expressly given to the Provincial Legislature.' And it is apparent, from Lambe's case (12 App., cases 586) that the "sifting" there mentioned of the principles and interpretation has placed a very different meaning on these words from what was at first sight supposed to be the true meaning. For instance, in Lambe's case (1887) the Provincial right to tax a bank is upheld, which was instanced in Severn's case (1874), as an obviously impossible contention.

But even admitting that the words "regulation of trade and commerce" in sec. 91 would cover this wide tire regulation, if there were no other part of the British North America Act to which it could be referred, yet these words do not stand alone, and have to be construed reasonably. Where a court finds that general words in two parts of an act may be so construed as to be in apparent conflict, it will not select, or insist upon an interpretation of either set of words as to establish that conflict; but will rather select or insist upon such an interpretation as will prevent the conflict. Now the subject matter of the Wide Tires Act, though, as stated above, it may be brought within this single sub-section of section 91, may also be brought with, I think, more ease and certainty within many sub-sections of 92. The public highways are certainly part of the public lands of the Province, the sole management of which is reserved to the Provincial Legislature. Now the nature of the vehicles permitted to use and wear away the roads, come, I think, within the head of the management of the roads themselves. Therefore this enactment seems to be authorized by sub-section 5. Again the public highways are certainly local works, and laws in relation to them are, therefore, exclusively attributed to the Provincial Legislature by sub-section 10. The right to use these roads is a civil right to be exercised within the Province; and the sole power of legislation concerning this and all other such rights is reserved to the Province by section 13. Lastly, it can hardly be denied but that this wide tire regulation confined to Victoria district is a matter of a merely local nature; and, if so, it is expressly reserved to the Province alone by sub-section 16. And, besides all this, it is decided that every topic of legislation is, by the B. N. A. Act, given out of the hands of the Imperial Parliament to the two bodies of legislature thereby created, (viz.,) to the Dominion Parliament and the Provincial. They possess between them all the power which the Imperial Parliament could have exercised; so that whatever topic is not possessed by the one, falls necessarily into the power of the other. The precise matter of the tires of wagon wheels is not expressly named in either section 91 or section 92; but there are general words in each list which might, in case of necessity, be construed so as to include tires. We must put a reasonable construction on these two sets of general words. Now, is it reasonable to say that the Dominion Parliament can alone regulate the width of the wagon tires in Victoria district, and that the Provincial Parliament has nothing to say in the matter? I think it would not be reasonable. The various subs. 5, 10, 13 and 16 in sec. 92, already cited, seem to me to be much nearer to the matter in hand, and every Municipalities Act interferes with trade and commerce much more largely than this statute. But the Municipalities Acts are admittedly constitutional. I therefore hold this statute also to be constitutional, and the informations well laid, and I convict the defendant of the offence charged in each case. But as this is the first case under the statute and (I am told) a test one, I shall only convict in the sum of $10. The interpretation Act, sec. 8, 43, seems to carry costs; but, at any rate, the sentence will be for $10 and costs in each case. The whole penalty in the Attorney-General's case will go to the Crown. In McNeil's case, one-half to him and the remainder to the Crown.

CITY AND PROVINCIAL.

DINING THEIR EMPLOYER.

Mr. J. C. Leask Banquetted Last Night by His Successor and Late Employes.

A thoroughly cosy and happy party, numbering about twenty ladies and gentlemen, the late employes of Mr. Leask, sat down to dinner at the Delmonico last evening, with Mr. Leask as their guest of honor. Mr. F. J. Squire, being the oldest hand in the shop, sat in the presidential chair and conducted the honors of the evening. The repast was an excellent one, characteristic of the good cooking of the Delmonico, and the discussion of it afforded no little pleasure to the partakers. It might be mentioned that the occasion was intended as a mark of the high feeling of friendship that has ever existed between Mr. Leask and his employes. He has now disposed of his business to Mr. Geo. R. Jackson, who is equally popular both in the shop and with the outside public. The strictly business part of the affair having been disposed of, the toast list was reached. Mr. F. J. Squire proposed "The guest of the evening" and read the following address:

To J. C. Leask, Esq.—Your retirement from the business with which you have been connected for the last eight years, affords us, your employes, an opportunity of placing on record our high appreciation of your worth as an employer, and of the many qualities of heart and character which have won for you that deep and lasting regard in which you are held by all who have known your business career. During the time we have spent in your service our labors have been lightened by the many acts of uniform kindness you have shown us. Your will at all times has been our pleasure, because in all our relations we believe your authority has been tempered by a sincere friendship. We acknowledge with gratitude your expressions of goodwill toward us, and whatever may be your course of action in the future, you may rest assured that our best wishes will be that you may enjoy a happy and prosperous life.

The address was signed by G. R. Jackson and sixteen others.

Mr. Jackson also spoke briefly, endorsing the sentiments expressed in the address, and Mr. Leask replied in a very happy spirit.

The party broke up about 10:30, after an exceedingly pleasant two hours and a half.

The address, executed by Mr. T. B. Norgate, on vellum, was a gem of artistic skill and taste. The border was of forget-me-nots, painted in natural colors, at the corners were a cornucopia, symbolical of a wish for plenty, and the whole, ornamented with birds and flowers, was surmounted by the arms of British Columbia.

NOT WANTED HERE.

The Scum of the Sound Cities Must Not Come Here.

About ten days ago, a party of nine vags rather reluctantly embarked on the steamer City of Kingston for this port. There reason for not wishing to come here was that they had heard of Chief Sheppard and his men, who have got a bad name in the Whitechapels of the Sound cities. They were forced to leave the land of the stars and stripes, however, and resigning themselves to their lot, they took up quarters in a cabin on Chatham street of this city. Peace and comfort was allowed them and they lived on what they could pick up without exerting themselves. One of their number, who is unfortunate enough to be minus an arm, took to begging, telling the kind hearted citizens who gave him money that he intened to start a cigar stand. But he didn't keep his word, for when arrested not a cent was found on him.

Officers Redgrave and Walker spotted the gang last night, and about two o'clock this morning, while the vags were in dreamland they came down on the cabin and run the inmates up to the police station, where a search revealed the fact that 75 cents was the assets of the nine men. This did not go much towards their defence, and so five of them were given 24 hours to leave the city, and the other four, who came up in the police court, were dealt with in the same manner. All promised to do as requested, and they will now have to find new fields for their labor.

His honor gave the men to understand that Victoria was no rendezvous for vags, and that when they returned to the Sound they had better caution men of their class from visiting this city. "Your country," said his honor, "has passed a harsh measure towards Canada, and you should not come over here to live on the people that you have been legislating against.

A WARM RECEPTION.

The Police Present a Full Dock to His Honor.

The police had evidently made up their mind to give Hon. A. N. Richards, Q.C., P.M., a warm reception on his return to duty, after an absence of several days, for the dock at the police court was crowded this morning. Drunks, whiskey sellers, and vags were there in force, and all were disposed of as is usual. Mabel Johnson, a resident of Broad street, was called first and paid a fine of $5 for raising a row on Yates. She was followed by Susan, an Indian, same charge, who had neither chickaman nor ictas, and so a term of one month at Topaze avenue was recorded against her. Charlie seemed to be luckier than his spouse, for he admitted that he had the bottle in his possession when arrested, which subjected him to a fine of $25, which he promptly paid. Jennie Chickens, who perhaps is better acquainted with the interior of John's hotel than any other citizen, pleaded guilty to being drunk, in a matter of fact way, and promised to redeem herself with $5 if the police would go to her cabin and collect that sum.

The cause of the downfall of these three Indians, H. Wilson, was ordered to stand up in the dock, when clerk Dowler read to him a charge of supplying liquor to Indians. "Do you plead guilty or not," sternly asked the clerk.

"Well, I guess I better say yes," was the answer.

Those few words cost him just $50, in default of which he will have to serve the Government for two months.

J. T. Pierre, charged with allowing cord wood to remain on the street beyond the time required by law, was dismissed by paying costs of the court.

Stole His Clothes.

Richard Bray, a hackman, reported to the police last evening that his room at 34 Blanchard street was entered yesterday afternoon, and two suits of clothes and an overcoat stolen. Several other small articles were also taken by the intruder who has not yet been caught, but the clothes have been found in a pawnshop.

Explains the Difficulty.

If you want to show your absent friends where you live, or if you want to explain some topographical matter, there is no better way of doing it than by sending one of T. N. Hibben & Co.'s maps. This shows everything in and around Victoria, and explains everything at a glance. Besides the large map, there is one on a smaller scale, price 50 cents, suitable for sending away.

Westminster Real Estate.

Mr. Benjamin Young, the well-known salmon packer, has become the possessor of one of the finest building sites on Columbia street, Westminster—the half lot on which Herring's drug store stands. The purchase was effected through Messrs. S. T. Mackintosh & Co., from Mr. A. M. Herring. The price paid was $15,500. Mr. Young announced his intention of having plans prepared immediately for a fine brick building, three stories on Columbia and two stories on Clarkson street.

The Prophetic Lectures.

It is quite apparent, from the increased attendance and attention, that the interest of the people in Mr. Grant's prophetic lectures is advancing. Last evening he examined the prophecies in the Revelation given under three noted symbols, (1) the red dragon, with seven heads and ten horns, described in the twelfth chapter; (2) the leopard beast, having seven heads and ten horns, mentioned in the thirteenth chapter; (3) the scarlet-colored beast, with seven heads and ten horns, set forth in the seventeenth chapter. This evening he will continue the subject, and the lecture no doubt will be of special interest.

A Pretty School Teacher.

A pretty school teacher said to one of her scholars: "James, is 'to kiss' an active or passive verb?"—James (oldest boy in the class) "both."—Pretty school teacher: "How is that James?"—James: "Active on the part of the fellow, and passive on the part of the girl." Pretty school teacher blushes and makes James "perfect" in grammar. "Diamond Dyes" are both active and passive. They are active and decisive in their results, giving satisfaction and pleasure to all who use them. Then they are passive in the sense, and harmless while the operator is using them. They give forth no poisonous and dangerous fumes, and can be used by a child. They are the only reliable and the thorough operating dyes in the world. Ladies, there are imitators; beware of them!

The Jewellery Auction "Bargains."

An incident of the cheap jewellery question was experienced by a city watchmaker yesterday. A man who had purchased a watch in the manner referred to, gave $35 for his "bargain." It went wrong inside a couple of days, and he took it to the watchmaker referred to. On examination, that gentleman found the thing next to worthless, and told the owner so. Thus one man at least paid for experience. Another case, somewhat more serious, in that it involves the name of a well known firm of jewellery auctioneers, is now pending in Vancouver. They sold, it seems, a cheap, filled watch case for a solid gold one. The purchaser discovered his mistake when too late, but that did not deter him from placing the matter in legal hands. It will come up before the court in due course, when the system will be thoroughly ventilated.

Bound for British Columbia.

The schooners Maud S., Capt. E. McKiel, and Geneva, Capt. H. F. Seward, now on their way to British Columbia on a seal-killing expedition, have some well-known Halifax men among their crews. The Maud S. takes nine men, viz.: Thomas H. Brown, Andrew McKiel, Peter Meuse, Thomas Hutt, Daniel Horn, Geo. Pietzon, John Bishop, Charles Lee and Ed. Cobill. The Geneva took thirteen men, named, Joseph Hutchings, George Hewett, C. Nielson, W. Croudy, W. Kinsella, John Singleton, Jacob Morgan, Chas. Keil, Richard Willard, Richard Gilbert, David Bayers and Ernest Carter. Some of the men are hired only for the run out, while others are paid by the month, with an additional $1.50 for every seal shot by them. The vessels have been fitted out for an all-winter cruise, and will be supplied with ammition and guns on their arrival at British Columbia. The model of the Maud S. can be seen at the office of Brown Bros. of this city.

Amusement This Evening.

This evening the Swedish Quintette will appear at the Victoria theatre under the patronage of the Lieutenant-Governor, and as a large number of seats have been reserved, it is evident that there will be a crowded house. Several Reasons Why.

Why is Northfield coal the best?
1. It is the hardest.
2. Gives a hotter fire and consumes the least fuel.
3. It does not clinker.
4. Free from stone and slate.
5. It makes a cheerful fire burning free and clear.

The Sewerage Loan.

To-day is the last for receiving tenders for the $300,000 sewerage by-law loan. It will be interesting to know how it has been taken up in the present state of the money market. Financial men to-day were quite animated over the question and discussed it eagerly.

LEGAL INTELLIGENCE.

SUPREME COURT.

(Before the Chief Justice.)

Sinclair vs. the C. P. R.—This case came up before the Chief Justice this afternoon, and was an ex parte application to set aside an award made by arbitrators in favor of plaintiff. The case involves a large amount of money.

PERSONAL.

Movements of Well Known People in Various Directions.

B. Young of Ladner's is in the city.

D. R. Harris and family are at the Driard.

Jas. Hemans of Ashcroft is at the Oriental.

Capt. Calhoun of Port Townsend is in the city.

A. J. Poudrier, D. L. S., and brother, have returned from Quesnelle district, where they have been making surveys for the Provincial government.

Y.M.I. Entertainment.

In addition to the comic drama of Robert Macaire, now under a course of preperation by the members of the Y.M.I., for production at the Victoria Theatre about the middle of December, a further treat will be given, the college garden scene in Rob Roy being now rehearsed, to be produced in conjunction with the comic drama.

Wagon for Exercising.

A large double express wagon has been rented by the civic authorities for the use of the fire department in exercising the horses. The wagon will be filled with hose, and will be a useful adjunct to the department, for besides saving much wear and tear of the engines and trucks in exercising, it will be handy to take hose to a fire any distance from the centre of the city.

Vancouver Baldheads.

Mr. Gillespie, of Vancouver, says that a woman who claims to be able to make the hair grow on a billiard ball, is doing a big business with the bald-heads of that city. Young and old men, but especially young men, are flocking to her rooms for advice and treatment. The charge is $50—no hair, no pay. The treatment is meeting with some success, and our informant is of opinion that in a few months there will be no baldheads in Vancouver.

New School Rules.

On account of an application sent to the Superintendent of Education by the teachers, that gentleman has given them power to dismiss their scholars at two o'clock in the afternoon when the weather is stormy. On such days the schools will open as usual in the morning but only a quarter of an hour will be allowed for lunch and the school dismissed at two o'clock. This rule was found necessary as when the children go home at 12 o'clock for their lunch on a rainy day they get damp and have to sit all afternoon in their wet clothes.

Better than a Directory.

Now that all the real estate men have shown themselves sufficiently enterprising as to provide themselves with a first-class map of Victoria, time can be spared to serve private people. Hibben & Co.'s map of the city and surrounding district should be in every business house, and also in every private dwelling. For the latter purpose the map has been gotten out on a smaller scale, price 50 cents. It is better than a directory, and much handier in finding one's way round town. *

For China and Japan.

The steamship Parthia, Capt. Panton, passed out last evening for China and Japan with 1844 tons of merchandise, consisting principally of flour for Hong Kong, and lumber for Yokohama. Her passenger list consists of fifteen saloon passengers, three second class, and 328 Chinese, steerage. The saloon passengers are: Dr. Laining, nurse and three children, Mr. E. L. Baker, Mrs. E. L. Baker, Mr. Douglas Dick, Capt. Harris, Mrs. H. E. Rennie, Mrs. E. Nelson, Mr. I. B. Fisher, Mr. James Johnstone, Mrs. John Strootof.

William's Weakness.

William B. Lowe is cook on the good ship Brodick Bay, but William is afflicted with many a good man's complaint, viz: a fondness for the bottle. While under the influence of its contents he neglects his duty and heeds not the orders of his captain. This morning he insisted on going on shore, contrary to the expressed wishes of his captain, who, when finding it impossible to restrain William from carrying out his purpose, saw that he had the protecting company of Provincial officers McNeill and Hunter, who saw him safely housed on Topaz avenue. He will appear in court to-morrow.

Change of Proprietors.

The Ship Inn, on Wharf street, has been purchased by Messrs. James Brown and Hugh Griffiths, well known in Victoria, from Mr. J. Meldram. Mr. Brown is so well known in our city as a first-class bartender that it only need be said of the new firm that they will keep the best brands of liquors and cigars to be found on the Island. Courteous treatment should merit a fair share of patronage. nov18-1w

The Late J. O'Connor.

The funeral of the late Jno. O'Connor left St. Joseph's hospital at 9 o'clock this morning for St. Andrew's R. C. pro-cathedral, where funeral services were read. A large number of friends attended and the floral offerings were numerous and beautiful.

A Vancouver Sealer.

Captain Copp, of the Vancouver ship building company, was in town to-day, and interviewed a number of the Victoria sealers for the purpose of gaining information for future operations. His principal object was to ascertain the average dimensions of sealing schooners, the manner in which they are fitted up, and the general mode of managing them. On these particulars he will form the basis of a schooner which he contemplates building for the port of Vancouver. The new schooner will be ready for starting out next season.

Mystery of a Hansom Cab.

People out on the streets early this morning noticed, when in the vicinity of the bank of British Columbia a dismantled hansom cab. It reclined peacefully in the mud, minus a wheel. There was nothing particularly strange in that; but on going down as far as Yates street, a similar sight met the eye. The coincidence brought up visions of a mystery of more than one hansom cab, but there was no mystery in it at all. The axle of one had broken down, and the horse had run away with the other. Verily there is nothing strange nowadays.

Lawrence in Trouble Again.

Poor Lawrence Mooney! In the words of the young reporter, his many friends will regret to hear the sad news that he is again in trouble. Lawrence left Victoria at the urgent request of the authorities, not so much for the benefit of his health as for the public peace. But Lawrence, in seeking the shelter and protection of the Royal City, also sought to tempt the Siwash inhabitants from the paths of sobriety. The police, usually inconsiderate and interferingly officious, molested Lawrence in his philanthropic purpose, and called him to account. Lawrence, highly indignant, shook the dust of the city from his feet and proceeded to the Terminal City. The last seen of him was by officer McNeill, when he was being escorted back to Westminster jail for six months.

Not a Success.

Many of our readers will remember the lectures given in this city by J. Spencer, who calls himself "King Jesus man," and the energetic appeal he made for the purpose of populating Malcolm Island, and the peculiar manner in which the work was to be carried out, remarks the Free Press. The response he met with to his earnest appeal was sufficient to start him in the enterprise, which he had framed in his own mind, and accordingly machinery was purchased and a start made by the erection of a saw mill and manufacturing of boxes. A number of men threw up their work at Victoria and accompanied him on his venturesome journey, but although they were very enthusiastic at the start they soon became discouraged and left for a more favorable country. Fresh men arrived but like their predecessors they did not remain long and at the present there are only four men, including J. Spencer, at the camp. So it may be safely presumed that the population of Malcolm Island will not be successful on the plans which were framed by Mr. J. Spencer.

THE LAST DAY.

The St. Ann's Bazaar and How it is Progressing.

The Bazaar being held in Philharmonic Hall by the ladies of the R. C. pro Cathedral is progressing as favorably as was anticipated, and the ladies are confident that even their former efforts are being excelled. The hall last evening was crowded with ladies and gentlemen, all eager to purchase the pretty articles offered for sale. The young ladies were as pressing as ever with their raffle sheets, and young men were just as anxious to take a chance, perhaps not because they expected anything, but because they could not refuse the request of the ladies. Charitable citizens were there in force, and many of the articles bought made the purchaser feel all the happier when he remembered what his small donation was intended for.

During the evening the piano was brought into use by the ladies present, and a very pleasant promenade concert was enjoyed by the visitors. Prof. Sharpe and the Baptly family engaged the attention of the audience in quartettes, solos and duets, and Messrs. Deasy, Catus and Short played a very pretty trio with banjos and harmonico.

At noon to-day the doors were again thrown open to a large number, the majority of whom where there to enjoy the hot lunch served, and during dinner hour the staff of voluntary waitresses were kept busy supplying the wants of those who dined there. The main hall, however, was not at all neglected, and during the afternoon visitors kept coming and going. The tables did not appear at all empty the ladies being ever ready to fill up the spaces emptied by articles sold with just as pretty things, and those who attend this evening will find lots of articles to buy. Another promenade concert will be held this evening when there is no doubt that another crowded hall will be the result.

To-morrow evening the hall will be opened at 7 o'clock for the drawing in the raffles and then the lucky ones will be handed over their winnings.

Returned from San Francisco.

W. H. Pennock returned from San Francisco this morning, where he succeeded in buying a splendid line of jewelry, etc., for his new store, which he intends to open out on Government street during the first week of December. Chas. Minor, the well-known jeweler, and Mr. Mackie, the engraver, have been engaged by Mr. Pennock.

The World Enriched.

The facilities of the present day for the production of everything that will conduce to the material welfare and comfort of mankind are almost unlimited and when Syrup of Figs was first produced the world was enriched with the only perfect laxative known, as it is the only remedy which is truly pleasing and refreshing to the taste and prompt and effectual to cleanse the system gently in the Spring time or, in fact, at any time and the better it is known the more popular it becomes.

Are They Lost?

Fears are entertained for C. J. Miller and Chas. Flash, two men who left here some tine ago for the American side in a sail boat. The boat they took was one of the life boats belonging to the wrecked steamer Sardonyx, which they borrowed from the C. P. N. company and which was thoroughly seaworthy. The report says that they got in the breakers near Port Angeles and were thrown on the beach, but nothing definite has yet been heard of them. Both men thoroughly understood sailing, and no doubt they have managed to save themselves if not their cargo as well.

SUCH A JOKE!

Cameron has beaten himself this time. He's sold me goods $2.00 too cheap. I know it, because I priced the same line of goods at another store before going to Cameron's. Ha! ha! ha! ha! he! he! he! he! ho! ho!

THE JOKE IS

that our much tickled man has paid Cameron's usual price, which is always lower than elsewhere.

The Man that's Beat is the man that has been paying two prices so long that when he gets a fair deal he thinks it's all a mistake.

WHEN IT STRIKES HIM

that, instead of beating us $2.00 now, he's been beaten heretofore on every trade, you'll see that laugh strikes in like colic. But he'll stick to us now he's tried us.
